BIG LAKE TO BE IMPOUNDED BY CAGLE DAM

MAN-MADE LAKE, HOWEVER, IS STILL A YEAR AWAY

Although the huge earthen dam which will impound a 1,400-acre lake in Owen and Putnam counties is now a reality, the completed man-made lake with its recreational facilities is still a year away.

That was the consensus of opinion in a survey of state conservation, flood control and highway officials.

The lake itself—actually a reservoir—is the project of the Department of the Army Corps of Engineers, and is being built primarily to prevent floods in the Eel river valley.

But the Army Engineers have licensed the Indiana state conservation department to operate a recreation and camping area on the northern tip of the lake-to-be. The state conservation department also owns a thousand acres of wooded land adjoining the federal project, and this apparently will become Indiana's 15th state forest.

The forestry division of the State Conservation department is in charge of the public recreation facilities to be constructed at the Cagle Mill Reservoir. A $35,000 allocation to the State Conservation department for grading of a beach, and improvement of a parking area and roads at Cagle Mill State Forest was made by the state budget committee this week.

The state highway department also has a bid below state engineers' estimates for construction of a new bridge at Cagle Mill and relocation of Ind. highway 42, but no contract has been let as yet for this work.

Plans are to construct this bridge before the water of Mill creek is impounded behind the dam, since the cost would be much lower. A highway department spokesman said that no completion date for this construction can be estimated until after the contract is signed, but that opinion that the project will be done yet this year.

To hold it, Jones had to use every waste basket in city hall. Now, until he counts it, he banks it, nobody in city hall has a place to put waste paper.

CHURCHILL'S PARTY TAKES VOTING LEAD

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Winston Churchill's Conservatives seemed assured today of an election victory that will end six years of Labor Party rule.

With a handful of seats still to be decided, the 76 year old Churchill appeared certain to gain the few more seats needed to win a majority in the House of Commons and become minister. It will be what he called "my last prize."

The Conservatives passed Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee's Labor Party in the vote tally in early afternoon and never fell behind again.

Churchill went to see King George VI tonight in the formal step leading to a new government.

At 6 p. m. (noon CST) the party standings were: Conservatives 316, Labor 293, other 1, unreported 9, later by-election 1.

Churchill with tears in his eyes, promised his supporters in a visit to a cheering Conservative party headquarters: "We shall do our best to serve all interests which are far above the rights and interests of the Conservative party."

Churchill, who will be 77 next month, then was summoned to Buckingham Palace by King George VI in the formality preceding formation of a new government.

Late in the afternoon returns from 593 of the 625 election districts gave the Conservatives 307 seats, Labor 292 and the Liberals 4. Labor lost 19 of the seats it had held before, but picked up three from the opposition for a net loss of 16. The Conservatives captured 20 seats from Labor and the Liberals but lost one of its former seats for a net gain of nineteen.

REPUBLICAN WELFARE BILL TO GOVERNOR

"HOME RULE" MEASURE IS PASSED; LEGISLATORS WILL ADJOURN

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 26.—(UP)—Governor Schricker was handed the Republican "home-rule" welfare bill today, and the 33-day-old special legislative session prepared to adjourn without waiting to see if he vetoes it.

The measure, a strategy scheme contrived by the GOP majority to break a legislative deadlock, survived both lawmaking chambers late yesterday despite repeated Democratic attempts to alter and defeat it.

Lawmakers expected to clean up last minute details today and go home. The welfare crisis they were called to solve was erased by congressional action permitting attas to publicize welfare records and still receive federal aid.

But Republicans held out for passage of an "omnibus" bill setting up a method for financing welfare without federal funds should that aid again be withdrawn.

In Washington, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing announced about the time the "home-rule" bill passed that $6,470,117 in welfare funds Indiana lost from August through November will be sent to the state.

Schricker has not indicated if he will allow the bill to become law. He could veto it, sign it, pocket-veto it, or let it become law without his signature.

"The responsibility now rests on the governor," Sen. John Van Ness, R., Valparaiso, said. "Republicans have put themselves on record to care for the needy."

The "home-rule" bill carries two provisions. It allows the state to finance welfare from a general fund surplus and sets up an 80-20 formula for dividing the welfare burden between state and counties should federal aid be cut off in the future.

It passed the House 58 to 29 under the title of a measure to postpone the effectiveness of Indiana's "anti-secrecy" law, which caused the initial loss of federal aid. But the bill bore no resemblance to the title. It was rewritten completely. The House vote was on party lines except for Reps. Ed Haverly and Robert Justice who voted with Democrats.

In the Senate, a simple majority was needed to concur in House amendments to the original bill. The vote was on strict party lines, 25 to 23.

Two Democratic attempts to amend the bill in the House were voted down. Rep. Carson King sought to change the state-county formula, and Rep. Earl Utterback suggested eliminating the emergency clause.

Senate Democrats questioned the propriety of the bill since the subject matter differed from the original title. Lt. Gov. John Watkins ruled the bill out of order, but a 25 to 23 party vote rejected the chair's ruling.

Those who knew her can say that is true. Besides raising her own family she took into her home and heart two granddaughters to raise.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. Ruth Thurber, Mrs. Arminia Fitzgerald and Amos Ferrand, 15 grandchildren, 11 great grandchildren, 2 aged brothers, James of Cloverdale and John of Seaman, Ohio, and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Ferrand's last years were made secure and happy by one of the granddaughters, whom she reared, as she lived only a step from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Lewis and their family. She loved her home, her family and enjoyed her many friends. She had attended church service the evening before her passing, with a friend.

fat hobo, one overdressed lady on high heels and a clown with terribly large feet enters.

"Turn around so I can get a better look at you," she smiles.

All three turn around and parade in front of her. Each emphasizing the character he is portraying.

"Well now, let me see. You must be Jeanie White," guesses Mrs. Johnson as she points to the hobo.

The hobo giggles and shakes his head no.

After guessing a few more times she gives up. Distributing little packages of candy among the children she asks if they would reveal their identity to her. The children triumphantly unmasked and much to Mrs. Johnson's surprise they are the children who live just up the street.

They converse with Mrs. Johnson for a few minutes and then thanking her for the treats leave for the house across the street.

People like Mrs. Johnson make Hallowe'en fun for herself as well as the children. Unfortunately it isn't this way everywhere. Let's see what happens across the street at the Smiths.

Upon reaching the house the youngsters notice that the shadows are drawn and everyone seems to be in the back of the house.

After ringing several times a man finally comes around the house and grumbles, "What do you want?"

"Trick or treat," says a weak little voice.

"Well, you might as well go on because I haven't got anything for you," he almost shouts.

So the half mad, half frightened youngsters departed.

What makes old cranks like him, you might ask yourself. It may be that they are just naturally that way but more than likely something else has caused it.

Older boys and girls spoil Hallowe'en for the little ones by starting to soap windows and even destroy property two or

If these pranksters who seem to thrive on defacing the property of others will cooperate with the rest of us by finding other things to do at Hallowe'en such as parties or hayrides we will surely have a "Safe and Sane Hallowe'en."

RED PROPOSAL TURNED DOWN BY UN GROUP

PAN MUN JOM, Korea, Oct. 26. (UP)—"Horsetrading" Communist negotiators today abandoned their long standing demands for a truce line on the 38th parallel and proposed instead that it be drawn 15 miles south of the main battlefield.

In exchange for an allied withdrawal from Heartbreak Ridge and other hard-won positions of the main fighting, the Communists offered to pull back from the lightly contested west front.

United Nations officers told them immediately the new proposal was "completely unacceptable" because the suggested line would fail to provide military protection for allied forces.

They said later, however, that the proposal marked a sharp swing from the former Communist position and thus brightened the outlook of a settlement. A period of intensive horsetrading was forecast.

The Red proposal, unveiled before a truce sub-committee, countered a line proposed by the UN yesterday along the present battlefield except for a trade of 200 square miles of territory at each end of it. This would force a Communist withdrawal on the western end and an allied withdrawal on the east end.

The Communist plan calls for a UN withdrawal up to a maximum depth of 15 miles in the bitterly contested "iron triangle" area of the central front. It would also force allied troops to abandon Heartbreak and Bloody Ridges, the punchbowl area and other militarily important positions.

Roughly considered, the Red proposal calls for a straight line with little consideration for military security of allied forces.

The Communists also proposed that land given up by both sides should remain under the "administrative control" of the parties giving it up. They did not describe how such controls would operate. UN officers said the controls could work as a "detriment" rather than an advantage.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols, chief UN spokesman, said the Communist offer would be just a "theoretical withdrawal" because the area is of no military value and has never been contested.

"We have given it to the Communists by default," he said.

Nuckols pointed out, however, that the new Red plan marked a sharp departure from their rigid demands since truce negotiations started July 10 that the cease-fire line fall along the 38th parallel.

The original UN proposal last July demanded a hunk of Red territory as compensation for allied air superiority over all enemy held land in North Korea.

Another sub-committee meeting was scheduled for 11 a. m. tomorrow (8 p. m. tonight CST).

FREE AFTER 15 YEARS
MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Oct. 26. (UP)—Merle Penrod, 34, was free from the Indiana state prison for the first time in more than 15 years today because of a favorable ruling on his writ of habeas corpus.

Penrod was sentenced from Wells county in 1936 to 25 years for armed robbery. He was released yesterday when superior court judge Robert S. Baker allowed the writ on grounds the maximum term for armed robbery was reduced to 20 years since Penrod was sentenced.

Tigers To Play Michigan Team

DePauw Tiger grid team will go on the road again this week as they travel to Holland, Mich., for a contest with Hope College Saturday.

Mike Snavey's Tigers will be trying to add another game to their present string of four wins when they meet the Dutchmen, who have a record of three wins and two defeats this season.

Last week the Old Gold team managed a 33 to 31 victory over Kalamazoo in the fourth quarter. Hope has defeated the same team just seven days earlier, 35 to 33.

DePauw will have only one change in its starting line-up, using Jerry Helvey, Plymouth, at right end. A freshman this season, Helvey has seen little action but with Ken Wieland out with a knee injury, Jerry was moved up from third string.

Reserve end, Dick Sharp, had been alternating with Wieland until put out with a leg injury.

LOOKING AT LIFE

BY ERICH BRANDEIS

"Impellitteri Weeps at Reception Staged by Home Town in Sicily."

So reads a headline over a story from Isnello, in Sicily, where the whole town turned out to welcome New York's Mayor home.

I was, of course, deeply touched by the moving report of how the Mayor went to the little room in the little house where he was born. Although the day before the papers had reported that the people of Isnello weren't quite sure where the house was.

What I would like to know—and I am no cynic—is whether the Mayor wept because he was overcome by emotion or because he had been plainly told that he would be expected to contribute a large amount of money to the town.

Later, at a luncheon—and by this time "Impy" had dried his tears—it was announced that he had donated 2,000,000 lira ($3,225) to the town. Mayor Montelone announced that the money would be used to build public showers and to repair the convent of the Sisters of Mary.

It is reported that relatives and near-relatives of the Mayor came out of every nook and corner of Isnello to shake his hand, kiss his cheek, and claim relationship.

One of them was his first cousin—whom he had never seen—Maria Florentina. He kissed her tenderly and introduced her to Mrs. Impellitteri, the dispatch said. Another new-found relative came pushing through the crowd yelling "Bedduzzo zi Mama," meaning in English, "beautiful child of your mother."

It seems that almost all of the 4,200 inhabitants of Isnello, most of whom are goatherders and farmers, are relatives of the Mayor. It also seems that at least half of the population wanted "Impy" to help them to get to America.

If he succeeds in doing so, I feel sorry for him. With all those relatives around him he may wish he had never gone to Isnello.

One of the reasons I feel so sympathetic with the Mayor is that I know what it means to discover "long lost relatives"—or rather to have them discover you. Some years ago I went back to Europe to visit the scenes of my childhood.

Somehow the word spread and suddenly I found myself with more relatives than any human being could possibly handle.

Of course, being from America, I was considered a millionaire and of course every one of my relatives was poor and wanted something.

The result was that I spent most of the money I had taken along with me to Europe on my relatives.

I have nothing against large families. Uncles, aunts, cousins, nephews and nieces are fine.

But my trouble is that all my relatives seem to be poor. I still have to discover the first one who will do something for me.

May I take this occasion to announce that if anybody by the name of Brandeis who happens to be a millionaire and is looking for, an heir is a relative of mine, he may write me in care of this paper without delay.

This also applies to my wife, whose maiden name was Williamson. Pauper relatives need not apply.
